

From the President's Desk

By Rich Piper

Though the 2012 elections are still a year and a half in the future, it is not too early for us to be preparing for them now. President Obama has officially launched his re-election campaign and I know many of you have already received, as I have, entreaties for support and the new "2012" bumper stickers. If you don't have one yet and want one for your car, just let me know. The Pinellas County Democratic Party Campaign Planning Committee has also been hard at work in laying the groundwork for 2012.

The budget battles that have been raging in Washington since the November 2010 election have been heating up further, creating the basic framework within which much of the 2012 election campaign will be fought. President Obama has now, in my view, unveiled a fairly balanced long-term approach to the budget – one that promises major reductions in our government's annual deficits by cutting unwise and unjustified tax expenditures for the wealthiest Americans and making substantial reductions in other spending, while preserving Medicare, Medicaid and Social Security. Unlike his Republican opponents, President Obama has outlined an approach that responsibly addresses the long-term deficit problems while it maintains the social safety net for those who most need it. I personally prefer the budget proposal of the Congressional Progressive Caucus, which among other things trims health care expenditures through a public option. Nonetheless, the President's proposal is better than I expected and far better than that advanced by the House Republicans.

All of the House Republicans, including both Bill Young and Gus Bilirakis, have voted to support the utterly irresponsible and unacceptable budget proposal put forward by Wisconsin Representative Paul Ryan. Unbelievably, this budget calls for more tax cuts for the wealthy and savage reductions in health care support for seniors and the poor and vulnerable. By repealing the Affordable Care Act of President Obama, it would also undo the savings to be gained from the provisions of that legislation. This budget does not really address the deficits significantly, since it would cut government spending by $4.3 trillion but add $4.2 trillion in tax expenditures for the wealthy. It mostly rewards the rich at the expense of the neediest and most vulnerable among our citizens. Greed over need! The Republicans claim to be the party of morality, but this Ryan/Republican budget proposal mocks every moral precept I was ever taught!

Although there are many important issues for 2012, and others will likely emerge before that campaign is in full swing, I believe that the budget proposals of President Obama and the House Republican leadership have drawn the battle lines clearly. I think that we should welcome this challenge and try to develop effective messages at the Pinellas County level to support the President and bring victory to our local candidates in 2012. Hal Alterman and I have suggested a values-oriented message to the Pinellas Democratic Campaign Planning Committee emphasizing "Security, Opportunity and Freedom to Choose." We are considering bullet points that relate to each of these values. We and the Campaign Committee welcome your suggestions, both for bullet points and for other values and phrasing of values.

To that end, I hope that we'll hold discussions among ourselves, keep in close touch with Organizing for America and the Pinellas County Democratic Executive Committee, and set up focus groups to reach out to voters beyond our club membership and get their ideas on key issues and effective messages. (OFA coordinator Torrey Craig plans to stop by our May 16 meeting to introduce himself.)

At May 16 meeting, we'll be discussing all of these steps, as well as the latest political developments. We'll also be hearing from Dr. Mona Mangat of Doctors for America, an organization of physicians who have been seeking to build popular support for the Affordable Care Act and its reforms. Some of our club members have heard her speak at other gatherings and have been impressed by her knowledge and commitment.

In addition, Jonathan Skinner of the Pinellas County Extension Service will give us tips on energy conservation, including a power point presentation and some free energy-saving light bulbs!

OFA coordinator Torrey Craig plans to stop by to introduce himself and give a brief update on campaign strategies.

Please mark your calendars for May 16, at 7 p.m., at the Thirsty Marlin Grill, 351 West Bay Drive, Largo 33770.

POPULAR FLORIDA CONGRESSWOMAN IS NEW DNC CHAIR

Rep. Debbie Wasserman Schultz, a Florida congresswoman since 2005 and a former state representative before that, took over as chair of the Democratic National Committee in April, vowing that Democrats will "not be outworked" in the 2012 election.

Nominated by President Obama to replace Tim Kaine, who has stepped down to run for the U.S. Senate in Virginia, Wasserman Schultz brings to the DNC a formidable package: she comes from Florida, a 2012 battleground state; boasts an impressive fund-raising track record; and has a unique perspective as a working mother and a cancer survivor that connects her to female voters.

*Debbie Wasserman Schultz 52nd Chair of the Democratic National Committee

To avoid the Republican policies that she said have "failed America over and over and over again," Democrats need to support the president's agenda, institute the best organization and hold Republicans accountable for their agenda. "Republicans will throw everything they have at us. Fortunately, our everything is better. We know a little something about 'yes, we can,' but Republicans seem to be stuck on 'no, we can't.'"

One of her goals is to make sure voters know "what Democrats have done for them and what Republicans have done against them."

The Largo club has extended speaking invitations to Wasserman Schultz several times –when she was "just" a congresswoman beloved by the Democratic rank and file for her aggressive, outspoken advocacy for liberal points of view and since being named the third woman DNC chair ever. Hope springs eternal, as they say.

If you don't mind traveling to Hollywood, Florida, you can see her at the State Party's June 11 Jefferson-Jackson Dinner.

PINELLAS COUNTY'S RE-ENERGIZER BUNNY

As chairman of the Pinellas County DEC's campaign planning committee, one of Paul Starr's priorities is reenergizing grassroots Democrats for local, state and national 2012 races. His most recent "words of wisdom" to the county organization:

"Martin Luther King Jr. said, 'A genuine leader is not a searcher for consensus but a molder of consensus.'

"I have spoken about the importance of securing the independent vote and how we must do this not by sacrificing our ideals, but by demonstrating that our ideals are the true American ideals, and how the state party wants us to focus on neighbor to neighbor campaigning.

"Last month George Gonzales (a 2008 candidate for the state House from District 54) talked about how we must reach out to our neighbors, talk to our neighbors, show them that "you and your family have something in common with their struggles." That is how we become molders of consensus. When we reach out to our fellow Democrats, to the independents, to the disillusioned Republicans to share our vision for a better tomorrow; then we become the leaders Dr King spoke of.

"Dr. King also said, 'In the end we will not remember the words of our enemies, but only the silence of our friends.' The unions are our friends and we must not be remembered for our silence. We must stand up and fight for their rights, the same as they have stood up and fought for ours. We must stop talking about outreach and begin reaching out. We must share our vision for tomorrow, and we must do so today.

"We must pick up the torch of fair treatment that our union brothers have carried for so long. We must speak the truth about what is happening in America. We must stand up in unity and say 'what they do to our brother, they do to us all.' We must fight, not for what is easy, but for what is right. We must become the genuine leaders that Dr King spoke of.

"Now is the time for action. Tomorrow never comes, so we must begin tonight. When our union brothers call for action, stand up and say 'Here I am, send me.'

"We are Democrats. That's what we do."

Charlie Justice Speaks at April Meeting

Former state senator and 2010 U.S. Congress candidate Charlie Justice gave his take on the legislative session at the club's April meeting, followed by a Q and A that included quizzing about his future political plans. If he's decided, he's keeping the answer close to his vest.

Like all of us, he's still shaking his head at the GOP's shameless rush to push through their own agenda regardless of what's in Florida's best interest.

Plans are already afoot for a follow-up to last year's Old-Fashioned Campaign Rally Picnic. It's been set for Oct. 15 at Largo's Taylor Lake Park and Theresa Fedorczyk has agreed to chair once again. STATE CHAIR HEADLINES DEM WOMEN ON THE MOVE EVENT

Pinellas County's Democratic Women on the Move are hoping an appearance by Rod Smith, chairman of the Florida Democratic Party – the first in the area since he was elected in January – will generate excitement and enthusiasm for the 2012 election season.

FUN RAISING AND FUND RAISING

The Pinellas DEC kicked off the 2012 Fun Raising/Fund Raising season with a dance April 9 at the Gulfport Casino. According to Karen Hodgen, PCDEC vice chair and one of the event coordinators, a good start was made at "building our war chest so we can be prepared for 2012."

Protestors Give Brandes Failing Grades

On Tuesday, May 10, progressive activists associated with "Awake the State" gathered at the district offices of Florida House District 52 Representative Jeff Brandes to protest the just ended Florida Legislative Session that may go down as the worst and most anti-middle class, anti-worker session in Florida history.

The 125 or so sign wavers who turned out for the Awake the State rally didn't get to present their giant report card filled with D's and F's for Brandes' votes on environmental regulations, workers and unions, consumers' rights and voters' rights. When reached by phone, he told a reporter he was still in Tallahassee wrapping up from the just-ended legislative session.

ART OF POLITICAL MESSAGING. OR IS IT A SCIENCE?

*By Lodewijk van den Berg
Largo/Mid-Pinellas Democratic Club
Board of Directors*

Everybody talks about messages and how to get them out. During the past few months I have heard much talk about messaging, but very few concrete statements and plans. So I have decided to start from scratch and see what I can get together and possibly contribute to the discussion among Democrats as we prepare for the 2012 elections.

Types of Messages

The way I see it, there are basically two types of messages: Philosophical messages, for example social justice, the economy, health care, employment stability, tax policies, education, discrimination, women's rights, energy policy. These messages are useful for longer presentations, especially to an audience that is already like-minded.

Then there are talking points: essentially concise, to-the-point messages that are useful in short-duration exchanges as in interviews, debates and advertisements. These could be about issues such as jobs, budget deficit, national debt, employment, unions, law enforcement, drug policy, right to choose, development rules, cost of military deployments, investments in research, educational issues, space policy, or whatever is important at the time.

No matter what the questions are, one should always come back to the talking point. Watch interviews with effective politicians - there is no doubt what their message is. They stay "on message" and it doesn't really matter what questions they are asked; they always come back to their message.

Of course, time and thought must be put into developing strong messages and carefully choosing the language.

A candidate's message will not get out unless he or she makes sure it does. This doesn't mean you ignore everything else, nor does it mean you repeat the same lines ad-nauseam. It does mean that you will find opportunities to discuss your talking points.

Preparing to Run

Candidates for office should take stock of their own strengths and weaknesses and of the political issues they want to use in their campaign. They should be thoroughly informed about all aspects and issues of the office for which they are a candidate so that they can easily use them in discussions, answer questions with facts, and develop talking points.

Candidates should also inform themselves about an opponent's stand on issues, voting record if there is one, his or her strengths and weaknesses. They should always be prepared to answer an opponent's statements with facts.

Information Data Base

In order to develop a critical set of messages, it will be necessary to assemble a relevant database for each candidate. This database should include the following information:

1. Publications in the press or transcripts of media interviews that discuss issues of national, statewide or local interest, especially those pertaining to the office sought by the candidate.
2. The position of the Democratic national, state or local party on these issues.
3. The position of his/her opponent on these issues.
4. Questions raised by constituents and the response of the candidate to these questions.

EDITOR'S NOTE: Kudos to Lodewijk, a fairly recent club member and new to the board, for articulating points that should be considered by every Democratic candidate. Anyone wishing to add to the discussion can forward thoughts to kathleenjamison@hotmail.com for the next issue of the newsletter or to largodemocrats.com for the club's website.

EDITORIAL COMMENTS

Things I wish I'd said, but am glad somebody did.

*Compiled by Kathleen Jamison
GOP's Radical Agenda*

"The 2011 Florida Legislature will go down in history as the most radical ever. Members are ramming through all items on the GOP wish list without any serious debate. We are told that these things are needed to improve the economy. How does limiting the right to register voters or allowing people less time to vote early help the economy? And I'm not sure how 18 bills targeting women and their reproductive rights are beneficial to the economy either. Or bills to deregulate the insurance industry and allow rates to sky rocket.

"Thankfully, all of the members of the Legislature will have to run for election in 2012 because of redistricting. Send them back to the private sector before it's too late for Florida."

Some Good News

Thanks to a Leon County judge, the state's minimum wage will increase by six cents an hour to $7.31 on June 1. He ruled that the state had been miscalculating the rate.

Naturally the governor was "disappointed" in the decision, but has said he won't appeal it.

Legalizing Bribery

If members of the Legislature hope to get away with brazenly legalizing "leadership funds" that allow them to accept unlimited contributions from those seeking favorable treatment, "then the people of Florida should spend the next year and a half making them regret it," wrote St. Pete Times columnist Howard Troxler.

Among those voting yes – and let's write their names in red ink somewhere prominent so we don't forget – were Reps. Jim Frishe, Larry Ahern, Jeff Brandes, Ed Hooper, Peter Nehr and Sen. Jack Latvala.

From a Times editorial: "For all the talk about doing things differently in Tallahassee, state leaders finalized next year's state budget the way it almost always has been done: in secret, with leaders getting what they want, regardless of what's in Florida's best interest. Gov. Rick Scott, who claimed during his campaign that he would be different and not succumb to the Tallahassee machine, now looks like a poser."

A Party Goes Astray

I have been a Republican since I voted for Gerald Ford in 1976. The Florida Republican Party in particular and the national party in general have forced me to re-evaluate. The only members of society the Republican Party represents are big business and the rich.

Shame on my party.

Discouraging Voting

If the Tallahassee Republicans thought the people really supported their issues, they would encourage everyone to vote and they would draw competitive districts so that votes cast would truly endorse a specific platform of ideas. Instead, they would rather use Big Government to hinder voters and limit competition.

Legislature Shows No Love for Children

In a Times op-ed piece, David Lawrence Jr., president of the Children's Movement of Florida, wrote that he had many meetings with the governor, Mike Haridolopos, Dean Cannon and other key legislators to discuss five priority issues – health insurance for all children, screening and treatment for children who may have special needs, improving Florida's voluntary pre-K program, high-quality mentoring and high-quality parent skill-building. "Every time I was told, 'We are with you.'

"They may ignore us this session, but they will not be able to ignore us in the future. Florida's children deserve to be the state's highest priority. They clearly are not that now. That is shortsighted and just wrong."

The More They Do, the Worse It Gets

So much depressing and/or hilarious political stuff to write about, so little time. Share your own favorites with the newsletter at kathleenjamison@hotmail.com.

More next issue! With all the crazy GOP presidential candidates coming out of the woodwork, you know we're going to have some fun. (Hope it's not true that Howard Troxler is packing it in. He's Florida's answer to Jon Stewart as one of the slyest, savviest political commentators around. That's my opinion and I'm sticking to it!)
